

Carol Brunson Day, Ph.D.
President
National Black Child Development Institute
1313 L St NW Suite 110
Washington, DC 20005-4110
202-833-2220
E: cday@nbcidi.org

Carol Brunson Day is recognized as a leader in the field of early childhood education.

She is currently the President of the National Black Child Development Institute, whose mission is to improve and advance the quality of life for Black children and families through advocacy and education. Before coming to NBCDI, she served for twenty years as the CEO and President of the Council for Professional Recognition, a Washington, D.C.-based association that serves as the home of the Child Development Associate National Credentialing Program, as well as the National Head Start Fellowship Program. Dr. Day was also the liaison for the international exchange between the schools in Reggio Emilia, Italy and the early childhood community in the United States

Dr. Day sits on numerous national boards including Zero to Three Editorial Board, National Center for Professional Development and Inclusion National Advisory Panel, and T.E.A.C.H. Early Childhood Technical Assistance Center National Advisory Panel and has spoken at conferences and programs across the United States and internationally. She has authored publications on subjects such as professional development, diversity and multicultural education, and cultural influences on development, and has a long history of interest and expertise on African-American culture and heritage.

Dr. Day received a B.A. in Psychology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, a M.Ed. in Early Childhood Education from the Erikson Institute in Chicago and a Ph.D. in Education from Claremont University in Claremont, California.